Experienced, accredited and reliable

Biosite believe that having an experienced and reliable Gateman/Traffic Marshall is one of the most important requirements on site. These individuals are the first to face the public and often act as a barrier to prevent unwanted intruders or vehicles from entering site. All Biosite Gatemens and Traffic Marshalls are fully qualified and are required to attend a refresher course on an annual basis.

Nationwide coverage

Biosite Security have excellent connections and recruit nationally, meaning they can provide fully qualified and reliable officers to your site no matter where you are located. Biosite operate a national programme for training guards and gatemens and can meet individual training needs for all main contractors and site requirements.

Site specific policies

Prior to placing an officer on duty, Biosite will visit site to identify the safety requirements and risks. In addition, Risk Assessments and Method Statements will be carried out against a site's specific health and safety requirements and checklists. These are then reviewed by Biosite's CMIOSH consultant. As standard, each site will receive a site log book, RAMS, spare uniform (cold weather) and be assigned a member of Biosite Operations as their primary contact.

- Management visits: Biosite's in house team will meet with officers on a fortnightly basis to ensure performance is maintained and welfare is sufficient.
- Out of hours: Biosite operate a 24 hour control room and have multiple mobile officers on the road. Out of hours, officers are monitored on site, to ensure safety and welfare.
- Site management: You will be assigned a dedicated operations individual as your first point of contact. On a monthly basis your security requirements, staffing levels, and service level standards are reviewed.
